214 m 2 Kolk

The Kolk is now a staircase connecting the Binnenrotte with the cube buildings in the Blaakse Bos. Before, the Kolk was a water area partly covered with houses built above the water. In 1940, it got filled up with the rubble of destroyed city after the bombing.

463 m 3 Willemsbrug

The bridge connects Noordereiland with the old harbour. The bridge is named after King Willem III and designed by C. Veerling. It was created in 1981. In 1983 it got the National price of Steel (Nationale Staalprijs).

The predecessor of this bridge played an important role during World War II. The Dutch army defended this bridge after the invasion of the Germans on the 10th of May 1940. They could stop the German invasion at this spot and the Germans decided to bomb the center of Rotterdam on May 14, 1940.

547 m 4 Kubuswoningen

The 38 "kubuswoningen" or cube buildings near the Oude Haven were built between 1982 and 1984 by the Dutch architect Piet Blom. The idea was that the building got stuck on top of a pillar, allowing extra space below. This inspiration was based on Le Corbusier. The buildings are also described as resembling huge dice. His bridge for pedestrians and the cube houses on top refers to the Ponte Vecchio in Florence.

35.6 km 6 Dorpskerk

A late-gothic cross church, build and rebuild from 1475 (1), possibly older. Several storms have demolished the church which has been rebuild time after time. After the Siege of Leiden by the Spaniards in 1573/1574 it was only rebuild in 1615 (2).

Still several old elements (17th century) are present in the church.

The church is a monument.

39.8 km 7 City wall tower Oostenrijk

This tower is the only remaining part of the City wall. The tower had 9 shooting holes, enabling good defense of the city. The city wall around Leiden originally had 33 of these towers. One identical one called "Bourgondie" was demolished in 1871. Both have probably been named after the ruling landlords Maria de Rijke van Bourgondie and her husband Maximilaan, Archduke and later emperor of Oostenrijk (Austria).

The history of this wind mill dates back to the early 17th century, being mentioned on a map of 1618 as "Vennemolen". IN 1835 the mill has undergone a large restoration. in 1935 the mill was largely renewed. It was put out of duty in 1954. Since the restoration of 1996-1998 the mill is sometimes used again to pump out water of the Vennepolder again.

85.5 km 18 Ria's

Overtoom has a few private closed sex-clubs, which can be recognised by the stone windows, the door with a small looking-hole and the indirect lighting on the façade. There is one at the beginning and at the end of the long street: Ria's at 558 and the Golden Key at 294. According to some web-sites, the Golden Key is not to be recommended, but Ria's is, if you are into this.

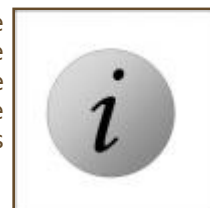

You might notice some taxi-drivers waiting in this neighbourhood. The reason is what's called the "taxi scam". For every customer brought to a club through the drivers recommendation the driver receives a fee (somewhere around 75). What used to be a payment to the driver for delivering a new customer to an establishment has now become a hidden tax upon the visitor of these sex-clubs. The driver is paid whether he recommended the place to you or not, and you are either asked for it directly upon entry, or it is added to your bill. The driver sits outside and waits until he is paid.

88.1 km 27 Weteringstraat x Tweede Weteringdwarsstraat

This neighborhood was created in the 17th century when immigrants from Wallonia and France settled here. The city council encouraged this development, partly because many people were skilled spinners and weavers. This gave them an opportunity to establish their businesses in small buildings which also served as a residence. You also see here several courtyards and a former Walloon Orphanage. This simple neighborhood for the poor is part of a larger social housing project that was built simultaneously with the canals. The land between Spiegelgracht, Prinsengracht, Reguliersgracht and Lijnbaansgracht was offered for free to charities, which financed the construction of the houses. To keep costs low, Philips Vingboons designed the houses in a uniform way. There were two storeys above a basement, which were often rented out separately.

88.4 km 28 Heineken Brewery

Here The Heineken Experience is located, a museum about Heineken beer and its brewery.

The Heineken company was founded in 1864 when the 22-year-old Gerard Adriaan Heineken bought a brewery known as De Hooiberg (the haystack) in Amsterdam. In 1886 Dr. H. Elion, a pupil of the French chemist Louis Pasteur, developed the "Heineken A-yeast" in the Heineken laboratory. This yeast is still the key ingredient of Heineken beer.

After World War I, the company focused more and more on export. Three days after Prohibition ended in the United States, the first Heineken shipment landed as the first legal shipment of beer. From that day on, Heineken has remained one of the most successful imported beer brands in the United States.

In 1968 Heineken merged with its biggest competitor, Amstel, and in 1975 opened a new brewery in Zoeterwoude. The Amstel brewery was closed in 1980, and its production moved to Zoeterwoude and Den Bosch.
